

Ingrid Nelson

Research Assistant

Youth Development and Engagement

Ingrid Nelson is a research assistant at JGC and a third year doctoral student in the Sociology of Education program at Stanford. Her research interests include out-of-school time programming, experiential education, and organizational theory. Ingrid is currently a member of the Haas Center for Public Service Student Advisory Board, coordinator of the Academic Support and Advising program, and a member of the AERA Graduate Student Council. Prior to attending graduate school, Ingrid received her BA from Wellesley College and spent time working as a science teacher, an after-school program coordinator, and a summer camp director.